A NOTE BEFORE YOU BEGIN

Hi Nari,

I put together the strategy brief you should have received separately. This intake goes alongside it, and honestly, it's the thing that'll make our first session actually useful instead of just another orientation call.

I designed this intake specifically for where you are right now: a real brand with an engaged audience, a clear emotional promise, and commercial potential that hasn't fully been structured yet. The questions aren't generic consulting boilerplate. They're designed to surface the specific things I need to form a sharper point of view before we sit down together.

You'll move through it in about 15 to 20 minutes. Some answers you'll know immediately. Others might make you pause, and that pause is actually useful data too. Don't overthink any of it. Your instinct is more valuable to me than a polished answer.

"The goal isn't for you to have everything figured out. The goal is for me to understand where you actually are, so we can figure out the next moves together."

If you have recent Instagram Insights screenshots, links to your top-performing posts, or any current offer pages: pull those up before you start. They're not required, but they help me skip past guesswork and get right to the interesting observations.

Ideally, complete this at least 24 hours before we meet so I have time to review everything and come in with a real point of view rather than reading the room in real time.

Looking forward to it,

Luis

WHAT THIS COVERS

Eight areas. One operating picture.

BUSINESS + BRAND

- 01 Brand basics and current stage
- 02 Growth goals and success metrics
- 03 Audience clarity and positioning
- 04 Market and language expansion goals

EXECUTION + PERFORMANCE

- 05 Content system and weekly capacity
- 06 Monetization status and future offers
- 07 Metrics, KPIs, and proof points
- 08 What you want from our session

WHY THIS EXISTS

Less setup. More strategy.

Most first strategy sessions spend the opening 20 minutes on backstory that could have been handled in advance. I'd rather use that time on what's actually working, what isn't, where the whitespace is, and how to build around your real life instead of an idealized version of it.

The intake is how we skip the obvious stuff and get to the part where actual strategy happens.

CLARITY

Less intro, more signal

Surfaces the information that actually changes strategy, not filler questions dressed up as depth.

EFFICIENCY

Smarter first session

I come in already knowing the shape of the brand, the pain points, and the likely opportunity areas.

STRATEGY

Built for real decisions

Clarifies positioning, growth priorities, monetization direction, and what to tackle first.

BEFORE YOU START

A few things worth knowing.

How long does this take?

Usually about 15 to 20 minutes. If you have recent metrics or post links handy, even faster.

What if I don't know my exact numbers?

Totally fine. Best estimates are enough. We'll sharpen the picture together; I just need a starting point, not a spreadsheet.

Do I need to have a website or offers already?

No. This works whether you're already monetizing or just starting to think about what that could look like.

What happens after I submit?

I'll review your answers before we meet so we can spend our time on strategy, priorities, and next moves. No recap of basics. We go straight to the interesting part.

Can I share this document?

This is a private pre-read prepared specifically for you. Please keep it to yourself.

The intake form is linked separately at the URL I sent you. Complete it at least 24 hours before our session if you can. If anything comes up before we meet, just reach out directly.
