

Strategic Intake

Criar Sin Culpas

SUBMITTED BY

Nari Fateha

PLATFORM

@criarsinculpas

DATE RECEIVED

April 8, 2026

DOCUMENT TYPE

Verbatim Intake Record

Record of Receipt. This document contains the verbatim responses submitted via the StrategyIQ intake form. No content has been edited, interpreted, or summarized. This is the primary source record for the engagement.

SOURCE DOCUMENT

ACCOUNT OVERVIEW

YOUR ACCOUNT

Posting for: 5 yearsFollowers: 26.9k

BRAND DESCRIPTION

Criar Sin Culpas is for parents who are overwhelmed and struggling to regulate themselves or their children—especially in moments of escalation. I speak to families raising disruptive, aggressive, or neurodivergent kids, including those on the spectrum, and also to parents who may not yet realize their child needs additional support or early intervention.

This space addresses what's actually happening at home: yelling, disconnection, lack of structure—and yes, parents who sometimes scream or hit because they feel out of control.

I combine real-life experience with practical, evidence-based tools like PCIT and the RUBI curriculum to help parents de-escalate, communicate effectively, and build structure that works in real life.

WHAT MAKES YOU DIFFERENT

What makes Criar Sin Culpas different is that it's a safe place for honesty without judgment—and with real guidance.

Parents don't have to pretend everything is fine. They can say what's actually happening at home—yelling, hitting, losing control, kids escalating—and know they won't be shamed for it.

But it's not just a safe space to vent.

It's a space where they receive clear, practical, and evidence-based support on what to do instead. I don't normalize staying stuck—I help parents understand what's happening, de-escalate in real time, and build structure that actually works.

IDEAL FOLLOWER

My ideal follower is a parent raising a child who is intense, disruptive, or neurodivergent—often dealing with aggression, defiance, or constant escalation at home.

They're overwhelmed and dysregulated themselves. They yell, they lose control, and yes—sometimes they hit. Not because they want to, but because they don't know what else to do in the moment.

There's little structure, communication isn't working, and they feel like nothing they try sticks. In some cases, they suspect something deeper is going on with their child—or they haven't yet realized it, but know something isn't right.

They feel judged, isolated, and exhausted.

Age range: 18–24, 25–34, 35–44, 45–54

Location: Mix of US & Latin America

Language: Spanish

AUDIENCE PAIN POINTS

- Losing control in the moment (yelling, reacting, sometimes hitting)
 - Not knowing how to de-escalate aggressive or disruptive behavior
 - Lack of structure and consistency at home
 - Poor communication with their child
 - Feeling overwhelmed, dysregulated, and exhausted
 - Not understanding their child's behavior (especially neurodivergence)
 - Guilt, shame, and feeling judged
 - Wanting to change but not knowing how
-

COMMON QUESTIONS

They reach out in real time, when everything is already escalating.

- "My child is hitting/screaming—what do I do right now?"
- "I'm losing control—how do I not react?"
- "Is it getting worse—how do I de-escalate it?"

Most of their questions come when everything is falling apart in the moment—they need immediate, practical guidance to handle the situation without making it worse.

CONTENT & PLATFORM

BEST FORMATS

- Carousels
- Single-image posts
- Reels

BEST TOPICS

- Neurodivergent parenting tips
- Diagnosis journeys / personal stories
- Self-care for parents
- Spanish-language content
- Respectful / gentle parenting

BEST PERFORMING POST

A piece of content that really resonated with my audience was:

"If your child doesn't listen until you scream... you need to read this."

It reached over 1 million views because it called out a pattern so many parents are living—but don't fully understand.

It sparked a lot of engagement—including pushback and criticism—which I didn't mind. If anything, it confirmed the message was hitting something real.

The content made people feel seen, challenged, and curious about doing things differently—and that's exactly the kind of conversation I want to create.

POSTING FREQUENCY

5 times a week for me.

VISION & GOALS

12-MONTH VISION

In 12 months, I want to grow Criar Sin Culpas to 100k+ followers—but more importantly, to build a highly engaged community of parents who are actively changing how they show up at home.

I want the account to be known as a go-to space for parents dealing with disruptive and neurodivergent behaviors—where they come for real-time guidance, practical tools, and honest conversations.

It's not just about growth.

It's about building a business that people trust, return to, and actually use to create change in their daily lives.

GROWTH PRIORITIES

- Grow my follower count significantly
- Build a more engaged community
- Land brand partnerships
- Establish myself as a go-to expert
- Expand beyond Instagram

BIGGEST OBSTACLE

The biggest obstacle right now is not having a clear monetization strategy.

MONETIZATION

No, not yet.

FUTURE OFFERS

- Online Live, Live workshop or webinar
- Private community or membership
- Printable resources / templates
- 1:1 coaching
- Group-coaching program
- Digital guide or e-book
- Email newsletter / paid newsletter

DREAM OFFER

Yes—this is what I've been building toward but haven't fully launched yet.

I want to create a full ecosystem of offers—starting with hands-on workshops, and expanding into a podcast, public speaking, a book, a docuseries, and a film.

The core is workshops where parents don't just listen, but learn how to de-escalate, regulate, and build structure in real time. From there, I want to scale the message through content and storytelling—reaching parents at every level.

OPERATIONS & AVAILABILITY

TIME AVAILABILITY

5–10 hrs/week

SESSION FOCUS

- Growing my audience faster
- Turning followers into customers
- Working with brands / collaborations
- Building and pricing my packages

SUCCESS VISION

I want to build a business I can live off—turning Criar Sin Culpas into a full ecosystem of workshops, a podcast, public speaking, a book, a docuseries, and a film.

ANYTHING ELSE

(No additional information provided.)